Did U. of I. mishandle sex assault allegation?

University pays student $77,000, updates student code, improves training

ChicagoTribune

The University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign paid more than $77,000 to a student who accused campus officials of minimizing her sexual assault and harassment complaints even after photographs and a video of the incident were passed around a fraternity house, according to a settlement agreement obtained by the Tribune.

The payment came after the student filed a complaint with the U.S. Department of Education. While admitting no wrongdoing, the university also agreed to provide better staff training on how to handle sexual misconduct complaints and revamped its disciplinary process for such allegations, including appointing an advocate for accusers.

To settle the case, the university also updated its student discipline code to prohibit engaging in voyeurism of sexual acts without the knowledge of those involved and to forbid the recording or disseminating of the activity without their consent.

The woman's federal complaint has helped bring U. of I. up to speed with modern technology, her lawyer said.

"We took a (discipline) code and administrative policy that was from the 1950s and made it current and relevant in today's social media world where lives and reputations can be ruined with the touch of the 'send button,'" said Jim Navarre, the woman's attorney. "I can say with no exaggeration that every student who enters the university will benefit from my client's action."

The settlement was reached amid mounting pressure on universities across the country to change the way they respond to assault and harassment allegations. The Department of Education announced in May that it was investigating 55 institutions for their handling of such cases under Title IX, a federal law that prohibits gender discrimination. President Obama's administration has launched a series of initiatives aimed at reducing sex crimes on U.S. campuses, where statistics suggest nearly 1 in 5 women will be a victim of an attempted or actual sexual assault during her college career.

The woman's case also provides an example to universities that still are adjusting to students' new ways of using technology and social media—particularly the ease of sharing photographs and video.

COMPLAINTS IN THE THOUSANDS

The Department of Education last year received more than 10,000 discrimination complaints, including those concerning race, gender and religion. About 3 percent of those were resolved using the early resolution process.

incident made them realize "new technology sometimes calls for new and evolving safety approaches and discipline protocols."

Still, a national expert in university-based gender discrimination said U. of I. fell short in many ways when responding to the student's initial complaints.

Regulations governing surreptitious recordings have been included in model student codes for the past 15 years, he said, and with college sexual assaults being in the national spotlight, universities should be hyperaware of the correct response to allegations.

"There has been so much publicity and talk about Title IX compliance, there is no excuse for mistakes like these," said Brett Sokolow, executive director of the Association of Title IX Administrators. "I don't care what their reasons are. It doesn't fly anymore."

The U. of I. incident came to the federal government's attention in May 2012, when a suburban Chicago woman filed a Title IX complaint against the university for failing to take action on her allegations. The woman was a 19-year-old freshman when she alleged being assaulted while attending a party at the Alpha Epsilon Pi fraternity in May 2011, and then learning the next day that there were photographs and video of the incident. She dropped out of the U. of I. after the next semester.

After being notified about the federal complaint, the university agreed in 2013 to work out a settlement with the woman, including paying her $77,151.

U. of I.'s dean of students, Kenneth Ballom, provided written responses to the Tribune's questions about the incident. He said the university changed its disciplinary procedures, including adding the provisions about photographs and video, on April 1, 2013, and they went into effect for the 2013-14 academic year.

In addition to updating the student code, the university promised to provide deans, resident advisers, fraternity and sorority officials, and staff at the women's resource center additional training on handling sexual assault and harassment complaints and their obligations as mandatory reporters. The university also modified its freshman orientation to include information about the disciplinary process and the campus' obligations under Title IX.

In exchange for the money and policy changes, the woman agreed not to sue the university.

Navarre, of the Chicago-based law firm Mossing & Navarre, said his client is "very happy" with the agreement.

"It is sad that my client had to endure all the hardship she had to go through to bring about this change which will benefit all, but history unfortunately tells us that sometimes that is necessary to bring widespread and lasting change to a large institution," Navarre said.

The agreement indicates that she has filed a lawsuit against Alpha Epsilon Pi, several fraternity members and the man accused of attacking her, but those records are sealed from public inspection in Cook County court.

Navarre would not comment on the civil claims. The law firm representing the fraternity declined to comment.

The woman now attends college elsewhere.

ID theft cases soar

From Target to Home Depot to Jimmy John's, data breaches have increased 1,600 percent

By Mick Swasko | REDEYE

Hundreds of dollars to an online gaming company. A $4 fast food tab. A few pennies here or there for who knows what.

Kathryn Broderick, 28, of Lincoln Park, doesn't have weird spending habits, but the thieves that have gained access to her identity sometimes do. Over the past two years, Broderick has been issued about five new credit and debit cards because of data breaches—a term that refers to private information being lost or stolen by a company—at stores where she has shopped, and had false charges on her accounts a handful of times, too.

"It has happened so many times at this point, it doesn't even phase me anymore," she said.

She caught the false charges—which included a cheap trip to McDonald's and about $300 on an online video game—by checking her statements regularly and quickly reporting them to credit companies.

"It's scary," she said. "It's not just the credit cards. Those charges can get fixed. But if (thieves) know your address or your PIN numbers, it can spiral out of control without you knowing it."

Broderick is hardly alone as data breaches and identity theft continue to soar. More than 56 million customers at Home Depot had their information stolen in a breach by hackers, announced Sept. 8, eclipsing the previous record of 40 million compromised customer accounts during a data breach at Target last year.

In 2013, according to the Illinois attorney general's office, there was a 1,600 percent increase in complaints specifically for data breaches, as well as a jump in complaints about identity theft. In all, according to the attorney general, $21 billion was stolen from consumers' bank and credit accounts in 2013.

"It's not a matter of if, it's a matter of when," said Illinois Attorney General Lisa Madigan. "I would be surprised if there is anyone out there at this point that hasn't had to get a new credit card or debit card at this point."

Madigan said identity theft is second only to consumer debt when it comes to complaints to her office, which has a dedicated unit to handle the crime. In the simplest terms, identity theft is when someone steals personal information from someone else for financial gain.

Data breaches, Madigan explained, are also becoming more common. They range from high- to low-tech. In some cases, a data breach can be a lost file cabinet or briefcase of personal information from a small business. In other cases—like Home Depot—it can be a sophisticated set of software from hackers used to obtain customer data.

"It's rampant at this point," she said.

A recent survey by Experian ProtectMyID—a personal identity monitoring service—found that 54 percent of Chicago residents report either having their identity stolen or knowing someone who has. It's an industry, according to Becky Frost, the senior manager of education for the company.

"In this day and age, identity theft is a business to some," she said. "Your data is a commodity."

Thieves who possess stolen personal data can either use it to purchase goods or services themselves, or turn around and sell it for profit, according to Frost. She said current estimates for what data goes for on the black market vary, but can be anywhere between $5 and $30, based on how much information a thief might have on a single individual.

"I will never encourage a consumer to be worried, but I will encourage them to be vigilant," she said.

Keeping a watchful eye on every single credit account is the most important thing an individual can do in order to catch identity theft before it gets out of control, said Steve Bernas, president and CEO of the Illinois Better Business Bureau.

"The faster you get to it, the better," he said. "There's no real protection. You have to be vigilant, that's the only thing."

Waiting too long can hurt a consumer's credit score, making it hard if not impossible for them to purchase a home, a car or open more lines of credit.

Bernas said he encourages everyone to get a free credit report from annualcreditreport.com. They should look for credit cards they didn't open, and any charges that seem out of the ordinary. He also said consumers should check their credit card and bank statements regularly. If there's anything that looks off, it should be reported, no matter how insignificant. In Broderick's case of having charges of a few pennies on her accounts, Bernas said it's common for thieves to make very small charges in order to test whether the card is still active.

Bernas also said consumers should be wary of strange phone calls they receive. He said his office constantly receives complaints about phone or email scams in which a thief will pretend to be a utility company, the Internal Revenue Service or lottery in order to gain someone's information.

Broderick said she has been able to avoid negative effects to her credit score by quickly reporting any payments she knows are false. However, between the fraudulent charges and regularly being issued new cards because of breaches, she has become even more careful.

"Go and check all of your accounts," she said. "Make sure everything is the way it is supposed to be. When it's a charge like McDonald's, you might not notice it."

Tips for catching identity theft

Bernas

With large data breaches and clever scammers increasingly preying on our bank accounts, Illinois Better Business Bureau President and CEO Steve Bernas says there's no real way to prevent identity theft. There are ways to make yourself less of a target, however, and some tricks to catch identity theft before it really does damage to your credit. Here are five things you can do to protect yourself:

QUESTION THE OTHER END OF THE LINE

If you get a call from someone who says they are with the IRS, utility company or anyone else trying to collect money, question it. Bernas said the BBB's website has a database of scams you can check to see if that collection call is legit.

CHECK THAT CREDIT

Bernas said getting a copy of your credit report from annualcreditreport.com—the only site endorsed by the federal government for credit monitoring—is key to catching thieves early. The report will spell out what credit accounts have been opened in your name. If something doesn't look right, call the credit card company immediately. In many cases, thieves will open accounts and have statements sent to a bogus address, leaving you completely unaware an account had been opened in your name.

IT'S NOT JUST $$

Identity thieves aren't always after your wallet. It's possible for thieves to also steal your medical identity, allowing them to use your insurance for all sorts of doctor's visits. Check your medical statements and make sure nothing looks out of the ordinary.

CHANGE THAT PASSWORD

You should never use the same password for all websites, especially ones that have your financial information contained in them. Passwords should be changed often, once a month if possible, and be difficult to guess. "Password123" doesn't cut it anymore.

COMMON SENSE

Thieves can be crafty. In some cases, it's even been reported that they will set up bogus Wi-Fi networks near busy hotels or businesses and snatch personal information of anyone who logs on. Stay vigilant, Bernas says, and use common sense when using the Internet.

Flights improving after fire

Departures and arrivals at O'Hare and Midway still not back to normal

Chicago Tribune

The number of flights in and out of Chicago airports was steadily rising Sunday after a fire at an Aurora radar facility wreaked havoc on the nation's air travel system, federal aviation officials said, but the time frame for normal operations remained unclear.

Departing and arriving flights at O'Hare International Airport were near 60 percent capacity Sunday, according to a Federal Aviation Administration statement, and were at 75 percent at Midway Airport.

Hundreds of flights have been canceled at both airports since Friday morning's fire at one of the nation's busiest air traffic control centers. Contract employee Brian Howard, 36, of Naperville, has been charged with setting the fire.

He remained hospitalized and under police guard Sunday, said Thomas Ahern, special agent with the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives.

An FBI spokeswoman said no court appearance has yet been scheduled for Howard, who has been federally charged.

The damaged Aurora facility will be fully operational by Oct. 13, according to Sunday's FAA statement. The statement did not say when O'Hare and Midway would return to normal operations, and a spokesman could not be reached Sunday night.

The FAA brought in technicians from around the country to speed up the repairs.

The first shipment of replacement equipment was scheduled to arrive Sunday night, with more expected over the next few days.

While teams work around the clock to restore network connections at the facility, air traffic controllers who normally work at the Aurora facility are now working at surrounding air traffic facilities and other high-altitude traffic centers.

As of Sunday evening, airlines had canceled more than 700 flights in and out of O'Hare, and nearly 500 flights experienced delays, according to the flight-tracking website FlightAware.

It also showed that 56 flights had been canceled Sunday in and out of Midway and that more than 260 had been delayed.

Passengers are encouraged to check their airline's website or mobile app for the latest information about their flight.

Minimum wage stats shatter 'typical' notion

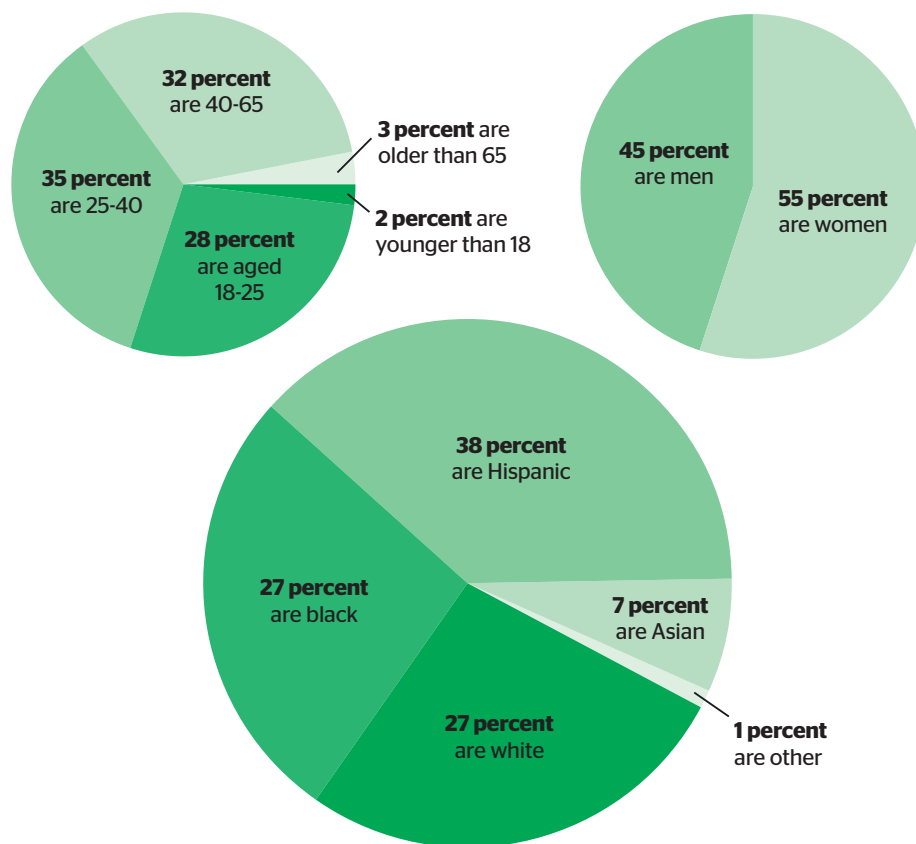

By Megan Crepeau | REDEYE

Whenever debate over raising the minimum wage heats up, advocates both pro and con start painting portraits of “typical” minimum wage earners. Those who oppose a wage hike say that low-wage workers are generally very young people starting out at part-time jobs, and that raising minimum wage would crowd them out of the workforce. Those who support raising the minimum wage say that workers are older, some of them with families to support, who need their wages boosted.

Looking at statistics on low-wage hourly workers, neither side is totally correct.

U.S. misjudged rise of Islamic State, Obama says

The U.S. underestimated the spread of the Islamic State militant group in war-torn Syria and overestimated the Iraqi military's capacity to fight the extremists, President Obama said.

In a "60 Minutes" interview Sunday, the president portrayed the group's rise as a result of the lawlessness of Syria, large parts of which have fallen out of the government's hands during the 3-year-old civil war there.

"Over the past couple of years during the chaos of the Syrian civil war ... they were able to reconstitute themselves and take advantage of that chaos and attract foreign fighters," Obama said in the interview. Syria, he added, "became ground zero for jihadists from around the world."

Islamic State began as an Al Qaeda offshoot, but its brutal tactics against other Muslims whom it considers heretics are so savage that Al Qaeda's leaders disavowed the group this year. After the group's rapid takeover this year of large parts of Syria and Iraq and its beheadings of two American journalists, the U.S. began leading airstrikes against the militants, first in Iraq and, in recent days, in Syria as well.

Breaking Islamic State's hold must involve both military and political efforts, Obama said.

Militarily, he said, "we just have to push them back ... and go after their command and control and their capacity and their weapons and their fueling and cut off their financing and work to eliminate the flow of foreign fighters."

BEARS

GREEN BAY 38, CHICAGO 17

MONSTERS VS. MAYHEM

THE BEARS THOUGHT THEY WERE READY FOR THE PACKERS. THEN SUNDAY HAPPENED.

Chicago Bears cornerback Kyle Fuller is pushed by Green Bay Packers wide receiver Jordy Nelson after a reception. JOSE M. OSORIO/TRIBUNE

By Chris Sosa | REDEYE

If you own a TV in the Midwest, you know Aaron Rodgers is the poster boy for a well-known insurance giant. But the Green Bay quarterback and his teammates would fit right in with another company's campaign, too.

Mayhem is everywhere.

Rodgers, whose stats were ordinary this season entering Sunday's showdown at Soldier Field, shredded the Bears defense in the Packers' 38-17 victory. The loss drops the Bears to 2-2 in 2014, including 0-2 at home.

"We just didn't play well enough," Bears safety Chris Conte said. "I don't think there's anything about playing at home for us. I just think that we didn't show up and execute."

After the Bears marched 80 yards on their first drive and capitalized with a Brandon Marshall touchdown strike, the Packers scored the next six times they had the ball (five touchdowns and a field goal). Not until 4:47 left in the fourth quarter did the Bears finally stall the Packers, blocking a field goal.

In an NFL rarity, the Bears never punted either. Three of their drives ended in points, twice they were intercepted, another time they turned the ball over on downs and two others ended when time expired at the end of the half and at the end of the game.

"Punters should be fresh for next week, I guess," a fairly upbeat Jay Cutler said after the game. "... It's a good and bad thing I guess, depends which side you're on."

Green Bay's defense was solid, too, as the Bears were shut out in the second half. Former Bears lineman Julius Peppers assisted that effort with a pair of tackles, and the Packers picked off two Cutler passes.

The Bears offense looked unstoppable in the first half Sunday, and all told it racked up 496 yards. But without slowing down the Packers at all, the Bears are just .500 heading into road games at Carolina and Atlanta.

"As far as yardage output, that's something we didn't like, but unfortunately yards don't win games, points win games," Peppers said.

The Bears will be looking for any kind of coverage in the future. Though they might settle for healthier players.

I'm the Soldier Field turf. You thought it was bad when Brandon Marshall had your defensive back one-on-one in the end zone. Then I trip Davon House, and Marshall hauls in an easy score. Protect yourself and wear longer cleats next time. Or pray I take Marshall down, too.

USA TODAY SPORTS

I'm Aaron Rodgers. You thought I was having an off year because I was completing "only" 63 percent of my passes this season before Sunday. Then I completely annihilate the Bears for 302 yards, four touchdowns and no interceptions. Bet you wish I had stayed home.

THE QUOTE

"You don't go into a game thinking you aren't going to punt or the other team isn't as well and that you're going to win it by 21, but we had a good plan. We were aggressive early, guys made a lot of plays."

—Aaron Rodgers, Packers quarterback

Green Bay Packers wide receiver Randall Cobb and Davante Adams
CHRIS SWEDA/TRIBUNE

I'm the Bears defense. That, um, was not the kind of mayhem I would prefer to cause. Maybe I can regroup next week against Cam Newton and Carolina. Excuse me while I do some cardio to prepare for all the running he does.

THE QUOTE

"I mean, it's Aaron Rodgers, you know? It's just an opportunity for us to get better, to figure out how we can stop this guy. This is adversity for us. Obviously, we've got those guys again. We'll be looking forward to that."

—Willie Young, Bears defensive end

I'm Jared Allen's illness. I took the big man down like a rodeo cowboy. If Fox Sports' Jay Glazer is right, I made him lose a ton of weight this week. Regardless, I made Allen miss the Packers game, and the Bears sacked Aaron Rodgers just once.

THE QUOTE

"Well, it hurt not having a lot of guys. Peanut [Charles Tillman], Jeremiah Ratliff. There are a lot of guys that we certainly could have used. Absolutely Jared. Jared is a big part of what we do."

—Lance Briggs, Bears linebacker

JOHN J. KIM/TRIBUNE

I'm Matt Forte. I'm a nightmare for opposing defenses—when my coach figures out how to use me. See what I did to Packers safety Morgan Burnett? He may have gotten up after I flattened him, but he didn't get to take his pride with him. 171 total yards from scrimmage Sunday gives me more than 10,000 for my career. Boom.

THE QUOTE

"That's how we should run the ball. The past two weeks have been rough. We came out and worked on it a lot. There were some holes out there."

—Matt Forte, Bears running back

JOSE M. OSORIO/TRIBUNE

I'm Jay Cutler's past. I keep coming back to haunt the Bears QB. Yep, that was me causing those backbreaking interceptions in the second half. Tipped passes don't land softly in the hands of Clay Matthews without my help, you know. Same goes for Marshall and Cutler not being on the same page. And sometimes I throw a pass short of the end zone with no time left in the first half that Martellus Bennett can't quite stretch into six points.

THE QUOTE

"Not an easy [loss to recover from], especially the way we played the first half, the way we were clicking. But it's early in the season. A lot of good things happened in this game."

—Jay Cutler, Bears quarterback

Matt Forte
JOSE M. OSORIO/TRIBUNE

Better or worse?

The Bears were historically bad on defense and fantastic on offense in 2013. Are they on pace to repeat those performances? Let's see.

Passing yards (278.1 per game in 2013):

Worse. The Bears are at 253.8 per game through Sunday. Which would be fine except for those pesky interceptions.

Points scored (27.8 per game in 2013):

Worse. The Bears' average dropped this week, and they're at 23 points per game in 2014.

Total yards allowed (394.6 per game in 2013):

Better. The Packers managed 358 yards Sunday, dropping the Bears' season average to 372.8 allowed.

Rushing yards per game (161.4 in 2013):

Better. Here's where the Bears can be proud. Green Bay had just 56 yards on the ground Sunday, lowering the Bears' average to 106.8.

Bears brain teaser

Every week, RedEye challenges skills you thought were useless once you left elementary school. For Week 4, we asked:

How many boxes of Kraft Original Macaroni and Cheese would it take to feed every fan at Lambeau Field a single serving, assuming the stadium is at capacity, and how much would that cost? (We used Peapod to get the price of a single box.)

Answer: It would take 26,912 boxes of Macaroni and Cheese at a cost of $42,789.55 plus tax (plus tax) to feed a single serving to every fan.

How we got there: We got there by taking the cost of one box, $1.59, and dividing that by 3 to get the cost of a single serving (there are three servings per box). Multiply that answer, 53 cents, by 80,735—the capacity of Lambeau—and you get $42,789.55. To get the number of boxes, divide 80,735 by 3 and you get 26,912 (rounding up).

THANKS TO ALL WHO ENTERED. WE'LL UNVEIL THE WINNER VIA TWITTER ON MONDAY. LOOK FOR THE NEXT CHALLENGE FRIDAY!

1	Let's have your MLB playoffs prediction.	The further St. Louis gets, the less interested I'll be.	Cardinals fans will be insufferable cheering on their squad, as always.	The Cubs won't be there. Lol. Hahaha! I'm sorry, that joke never gets old after 106 years.	John Domanico pitches no-hitter after no-hitter, earning a big $258M contract for 2015.	I'm already in college football mode, playa. See you in April!
2	No more Paul Konerko. No more Derek Jeter. How will baseball survive?	Like Gloria Gaynor. Is the song now stuck in your head? You're welcome.	Worldwide hysteria over the 2015 World Series champion Cubs, obvs.	Cheap beer and Disco Night!	Are you under the impression baseball was surviving because of PAUL KONERKO?	We gotta chill. Paulie and Jeter are legends, but they aren't keeping the lights on in baseball by any means.
3	Why are Patrick Kane and Brad Richards getting along so well?	Turns out that Richards makes a great wing man.	Their shared love of knitting.	One goal baby!	Bonded over their love for Ernest Wilkins' backyard parties.	They have a kind of chemistry that only guys with boring white guy names who have won Stanley Cups can have.
4	What excites you about Big Ten Football this season?	At some point someone may explain why the conference has more than 10 teams.	All the free time I'll have not watching it.	The cheerleaders! Is that too creepy or do you agree, because it's TRUE!	That Michigan State is going to win another title and Michigan is the laughing stock of sports.	Watching the conference get completely boxed out of the playoff system? Watching Michigan set records for futility?
5	Predict Martellus Bennett's next postgame metaphor.	No really, can someone explain why they call it the "Big Ten" when it has 14 teams?	Beating Green Bay is like running into your high school nemesis with the homecoming queen on your arm.	Say chooooooooooooo!	The Bears are like Prussian Francis. Outdated and worthless.	The team is like my weekend: a massive win despite continuous bumps, bruises, concussions and dehydration.

‘Blown away by all of it’

By Matt Lindner | FOR REDEYE

Turns out even the biggest stars find themselves getting starstruck from time to time.

“James Hetfield from Metallica said my name,” a clearly awed Paul Konerko said after Saturday night’s game. “This is crazy, just because you can hit a ball with a bat. It’s pretty cool. I’m just blown away by all of it.”

The White Sox threw a party Saturday for their retiring slugger, unveiling a statue of him on the U.S. Cellular Field left-field concourse.

Konerko got the ball he hit for a grand slam in Game 2 of the 2005 World Series back from the fan who caught it. Sox chairman Jerry Reinsdorf told the world the team would retire his number next year.

“The ball and the statue, I had no idea,” Konerko said. “They were just on the money with everything. The place felt really small. It felt like everyone was right on top of you.”

The Sox capped the celebration with a victory, winning 5-4 over playoff-bound Kansas City.

Konerko admitted to thinking about retiring after last season. On Saturday, he said he was glad he stuck around for a farewell tour.

“Looking back, knowing now what I know, I would’ve kicked myself for not doing what I did this year and coming back and finish this out right,” he said.

Paulie’s all grown up now

The sold-out crowd of 38,160 fans Saturday at U.S. Cellular Field weren’t the only ones happy to stroll down memory lane on Paul Konerko Night.

His teammates and a slew of luminaries, including Derrick Rose, Jonathan Toews and Derek Jeter, showered him with gifts, video tributes and well wishes. They also brought in familiar faces from Konerko’s past.

“I’m sure fans would love to get an inside look on what Paul Konerko is like. He’s very much the same guy,” said former Sox outfielder Brian Anderson, who played with Konerko from 2005-09 and still counts him as a close friend. “They probably don’t get to see his humor as much as I do.”

Greg Norton played parts of five seasons with the Sox and two with Konerko. He was Konerko’s spring training roommate in 1999 and 2000 and remembers getting into some fairly normal roommate arguments with him.

“He kind of got me stuck on heavy metal and hockey, which I hated at the beginning,” he said. “We used to fight about hockey because we only had one TV ... It was like really, we’re watching hockey again?”

As for Konerko’s future, his boss summed it up as only a Major League manager can.

“He’s day-to-day for the rest of his life,” Robin Ventura said. M.L.

Andre 3000 has a Jimi Hendrix experience

Los Angeles Times

Rapper Andre Benjamin had to learn to walk pigeon-toed before he could even begin to transform himself into guitarist Jimi Hendrix for writer-director John Ridley's new biopic, "Jimi: All Is by My Side." He started mumbling a bit more when he spoke too. But there's one thing Benjamin didn't anticipate when he agreed to depict the man behind Hendrix the icon, a sensitive, introverted sci-fi geek who was so terrified of singing he often turned his back on the audience.

"He wore heels," Benjamin says, "so I had to learn to walk in heels. He also permed his hair, so I had to wear curlers. Heels and curlers, around my house, like all the time."

Benjamin's own rise to fame as OutKast's Andre 3000 was markedly different than the rock legend he portrays, but like Hendrix he's known for pushing boundaries—from his outlandish outfits to wonderfully bizarre wordplay ("Shake it like a Polaroid picture!").

Yet for all his flamboyance on stage and album, Benjamin, 39, is a soft-spoken, thoughtful guy—not unlike the man he plays in the film. "I can relate to the story of an artist trying to become an entertainer," Benjamin says. "Onstage, you have all these wild antics and have fun. When you're in that world, you're something different."

Benjamin didn't know much about Hendrix while growing up on hip-hop music in Atlanta. He was exposed to the guitarist's music while watching a Vietnam War film. "I think it was 'Platoon,'" he says.

From there, he became enamored with Hendrix and even emulated the artist in songs and videos such as 2000's "Bombs Over Baghdad."

Because of Benjamin's physical likeness to Hendrix, he's been approached at least five times over the years to play Hendrix in projects by various production houses and directors.

None of those productions ever got off the ground, likely because they all hit the same roadblock—Jimi Hendrix's estate.

Ridley is one in a long line of filmmakers who tried and failed to get the rights to use Hendrix's music in his film. But instead of stopping there, he figured another way around.

"Jimi: All Is by My Side" features tracks by other artists that the guitarist was known to play—the Beatles' "Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band," Muddy Waters' "Man-nish Boy." In the film Benjamin sings over the work of professional guitarists channeling Hendrix's style.

"We didn't lean on those songs that everybody knows, we didn't lean on the performances that everybody knows, we didn't lean on the iconic figure that everybody knows," says Benjamin when talking about the unexpected benefits of not having the hits to work with. "I think seeing the human Hendrix gave us a blank canvas in a way."

Musgraves brings talent and charm to the Riviera

By Matt Pais | REDEYE

Late in her 90-minute set Saturday at the Riviera, Kacey Musgraves introduced a new song (“Cup of Tea”) by recognizing that the tune fits thematically with much of the 26-year-old country star’s material. “Nobody’s everybody’s favorite,” she sings, again advising the value of being yourself (“Follow Your Arrow”) and neither judging others nor concerning yourself with what they think of you. “You can’t be everybody’s cup of tea.” The song ends with, “Why would you want to be?”

Of course, it’s hard to imagine how Musgraves wouldn’t be someone’s cup of tea, as long as that person likes great songwriting, a dynamite voice and effortless stage presence that’s appealingly casual without ever seeming detached. Throughout Saturday’s show, her first proper headlining appearance in Chicago after spending the last year-and-a-half taking over country music and making non-country fans second-guess that viewpoint, Musgraves perfected sweet defiance, taking strong stances in songs that sometimes seem light. (Another new song, “Biscuits,” which Musgraves performed gorgeously without her band, takes a playful spin around the same ideas: “Mind your own biscuits, and life will be gravy.”) It’s part of what makes the singer’s Grammy-winning “Same Trailer, Different Park” so refreshing and subtly confident.

The flawlessly-paced concert found Musgraves shifting smoothly from upbeat insight (“Blowin’ Smoke”) to soft wisdom (the lonely, bittersweet “It Is What It Is”) to a variety of covers (Dolly Parton’s “Here You Come Again”; TLC’s “No Scrubs”) that reflect both her influences and her perspective. In front of a desert backdrop and neon cacti that fit with the sweltering heat of the packed Riviera, Musgraves’ voice sounded exceptional, whether it was intimate or commanding. She knows how to entertain and how to get people to listen. “Keep It To Yourself” and “Back on the Map” were particularly moving, while her version of Miranda Lambert’s “Mama’s Broken Heart” (which Musgraves co-wrote) elevated the energy.

Throughout, Musgraves embraced the role of laid-back country gal, noting, “I wish there was a trailer park downtown” after saying she’s never seen one in Chicago. This, of course, led to “Trailer Song,” another perceptive tune about keeping your nose on your own business. Part of what makes Musgraves so good is that no matter how many ways she cleverly echoes the same sentiment, she always inspires both thought and a smile.

ROMANCE PLANET

BY JENNIFER SHEPHERD | READ MORE AT LIPSTICKMYSTIC.COM

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

You're in a romantic mood, thanks to Venus. You'll want to turn off the phones, Internet and TV to focus on your sweetheart. Talk with your honey about your life plans, hopes and dreams.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21

Don't get stuck in the same old routine, even if you're nervous about making changes. Saturn is telling you to keep things fresh with your significant other. Don't take your honey for granted.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

Two planets are combining to enhance your powers of attraction. If you've been single for a while, that's likely to change soon. If you're in a relationship that's had its ups and downs, you'll be enjoying more ups.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19

You're wondering if you even want to be partnered, since romance can be so very complicated at times. Don't give up on love. Venus is offering some relationship challenges at the moment, but this soon will pass.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18

Someone is developing an attachment to you. This could be a neighbor, casual friend or co-worker. Chances are, you don't know this person very well. The moon is encouraging you to learn more.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20

The practical side of you could be dissecting your relationship, wondering if it has staying power with all the problems the two of you have had. The romantic side of you wants to focus on making things work, no matter what. Mercury says seek balance.

Aries March 21-April 19

Don't try to be a mind reader when it comes to your love relationship. Venus is filling you with funny ideas and you need to make sure you're dealing with reality. Focus on communication with your sweetheart.

Taurus April 20-May 20

With Mercury opposite your sign, you could experience some minor setbacks. Allow extra room in your schedule to complete important tasks. Make sure that you don't engage in silly fights with your honey.

Gemini May 21-June 21

Mercury will be retrograde by the end of the week. This means you could find yourself in a restless mood where you don't know which way to turn. It's best to avoid dealing with serious matters and focus on fun, flirtation and humor.

Cancer June 22-July 22

Avoid giving in to peer pressure or listening to advice from the "tribe." You could have friends or family members who are trying to affect your life decisions. The moon says you should follow your own path.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22

Work issues could be annoying. Jupiter is telling you don't give up. Try to be patient. Focus on enjoying quality time with family members, friends and your significant other.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22

Mercury is making it harder for you to get things done. You might need extra time to finish your work. And you and your honey might find it hard to connect because of competing schedules. Be patient.

Heavy Periods
affecting your life?

Nearly 1 in 5 women suffer from heavy menstrual bleeding, also called menorrhagia. Heavy periods are stressful, and can interfere with nearly every aspect of your daily life - from work performance, to family life, to social interactions.

You Have Options.

Right now, doctors at Lutheran General Hospital in Schaumburg are conducting a research study for a new, investigational treatment designed to reduce heavy menstrual bleeding. If you've been struggling with heavy periods and have finished having children, this study may be right for you.

If you participate, you will be treated by a local women's health specialist and will receive all study-related care at no cost. You will also be compensated for your time and travel.

ROB ZOMBIE'S
AT IT AGAIN WITH GACY ROOM

Rob Zombie at his new Great American Nightmare haunted house at the Odeum Expo Center in Villa Park on Thursday ANTONIO PEREZ/TRIBUNE

ABOUT LAST NIGHT

Rob Zombie expects some backlash for the John Wayne Gacy-inspired room in his Great American Nightmare haunted house at the Odeum Expo Center in Villa Park. The space brings guests into Gacy's living room and features an actor in Gacy's infamous clown costume and makeup sitting on a recliner blowing up balloons, as two dolls dressed as Boy Scouts look on from a couch.

Great American Nightmare features rooms dedicated to other serial killers as well (including Ed Gein, Charles Manson and David Berkowitz), but the difference is Gacy buried the majority of his 30-plus murder victims less than 15 miles from the Odeum at his former Norwood Park Township home. Still, Zombie didn't seem too concerned with what others might think. The heavy metal singer-turned-horror film director never really has.

"The Gacy room is funny," said Zombie, 49, Thursday at the Odeum. "Last year what it was was these little dead kids lying around and John Wayne Gacy is sitting in the chair folding balloon animals for you. ... There probably will be (backlash). There was last year in California. They didn't like the Manson one because that was a California issue. ... This is the home of all serial killers—the Midwest. So they'll hate everything, I guess."

Zombie's first Great American Nightmare debuted last year in Pomona, Calif. He and partner Steve Kopelman opted to bring the haunt to Villa Park and Scottsdale, Ariz., this year instead.

The Villa Park location will run through Nov. 1. It has three haunts that were each inspired by three of Zombie's twisted movies: "The Lords of Salem," "The Haunted World of El Superbeasto" and "House of 1000 Corpses." The serial killer-themed haunt is a nod to the murder ride in "1000 Corpses" and kicks off with a serial killer "Wall of Shame."

"I really like the murder ride," Zombie said of the haunt, which was based on actual crime scene reports to give the rooms authenticity. "Each room is a different serial killer. They're so detailed. ... You really feel like you're going through it. So by the time you're inside the Tate house and the Manson family is running wild around you, you feel like you're there."

Zombie said he comes from a family of carnival workers and spent much of his youth around carnivals. While his parents were on the clock, he and his brother would pass the time by playing in "cheesy" haunted houses. He believes haunts have come a long way since then, in large part due to the change in the target demographic.

"It used to be a trick-or-treat thing for little kids, but not really anymore," he said. "The adults are like 'I've got to get the kids trick-or-treating so I can go to parties.' We really try to make these for teenagers and adults. I mean, little kids go through, but I wouldn't necessarily recommend it. So I think the most graphic thing you can do is the best. Make 'em horrible."

Off the market

That silver fox George Clooney added some additional glint to his look this weekend in the form of a platinum wedding band, People reports, when the legendary Hollywood playboy married lawyer/activist/U.N. advisor/all-around-fierce human Amal Alamuddin in a private ceremony in Venice Saturday. The power pair entertained guests—including big names like Matt Damon, Anna Wintour and John Krasinski, among others—with an Italian feast, a ceremony presided over by the former mayor of Rome and a flotilla of vintage water taxis to carry the party to the Aman Canal Grande luxury resort. Pretty standard.

A fond farewell

Billy Crystal, Whoopi Goldberg, Bette Midler, Danny DeVito, George Lucas, Minnie Driver and a long list of other stars, as well as close family and friends, gathered at San Francisco's Curran Theatre Saturday to pay tribute to the late Robin Williams with a private memorial service. According to The Hollywood Reporter, the ceremony included video tributes: speeches from Crystal, Goldberg, Bonnie Hunt and Williams' wife and three children; and music from Stevie Wonder and an ensemble from a San Francisco church. Williams committed suicide on Aug. 11.

The “Parks and Rec” star and “Guardians of the Galaxy” heartthrob, who's had a pretty impressive year already, managed to make himself even more endearing during the appearance, giving real-life wife Anna Faris an adorably spontaneous kiss as the show's credits rolled.
